

CEDIA 2007

The annual UK expo for the custom install trade threw up an interesting array of AV innovations. HCC presents its picks of the show

Welcome to wetworld

The brand name has an eco-friendly feel, but we suspect that Envirovision's LCDs might encourage us to switch back from quick showers to prolonged sessions in the bath! If the 17in version of its waterproofed Freeview-ready bathroom TV isn't enough, there's also a 19in HD Ready model. Different variants of the Envirovision, which fits directly to the bathroom wall, specify internal speakers or waterproof twin-cone ceiling speakers. A range of finishes, meanwhile, allow the kit to blend in with various decor schemes. To prevent steam from 'misting up' your viewing, the outer glass screen incorporates heating elements. Well worth lathering up for.

Plaster In-Wall Speakers

Traditional in-wall speakers can be seen as well as heard. Not so these innovative variations from Amina Technologies, which consist of a panel that's actually mounted flush against the surrounding plasterboard wall.
